Echoes From Student Movement.

The twenty colored delegates who were among the 5,000 people attending the Student Volunteer Conference at Kansas City met at the Y. M. C. A. Jan. 3 to discuss ways and means of conserving the results of the conference for the students in our colored schools.

The following questions were discussed at length:

1. What specific impression or special message has the conference had for us?

2. What is being done in our schools to develop a missionary interest and to lead men and women into missionary work?

3. What is the feeling among students about becoming missionaries?

4. Are the churches doing anything to stimulate interest in missions or are they sending out calls for workers from among our students for the foreign or home field?

Only six institutions were represented and there was a strong feeling that our schools were missing a rare opportunity to get in touch with one of the vital movements among students of this age, an organization strong enough to call over three thousand students and teachers from their Christmas vacations to consider the need of foreign nations for Christian workers.

It would seem that our young men and young women are not abreast of the times, the pulse of interest in missions is weak, few are considering the glorious sacrifice of giving their lives to the evangelization of the world, and among some student bodies there is still to be found an irrational tendency to scorn or ridicule any religious sentiment. The complaint is made that church boards are stressing the need of support rather than the need of workers. If this is true, then certainly the call must be extended to our students by men and women who are earnestly and sincerely working in the mission field. Such a one is Miss Anne E. Hall, one of the delegates, who, speaking in the meeting of her work in Liberia, urged the reinforcement of the African field by teachers and ministers inspired to the extent of making great personal sacrifices. She told of a heathen town just fifteen minutes walk from the civilized city of Monrovia, where one missionary is working alone with five thousand savages. The picture drawn of the thirteen hundred members of his church thronging around the chance visitor and begging for teachers was one to stir the most indifferent hearer.

At the close of the meeting the following decisions had been made by the group:

1. To intercede as a body throughout this year for God's blessing on missionary work in Africa and on the efforts to be made in our schools to develop a deeper and more general interest in missions.

2. To try to have in every school a class for the study of "Daybreak in the Dark Continent," by Naylor, or "The Future of Africa," by Fraser.

3. To form in each school a group to pray for our work with special reference to the problem of the "Homeland," Africa.

4. To give by personal work and prayer help and inspiration to those who may go to the foreign field if we cannot ourselves go.

5. To urge our schools to grasp every opportunity for getting in touch with the great Student Movement in this country.
